PATTERN FORMATION - A DYNAMIC PROCESS.

Pattern formation is a dynamic process and what better time to understand this now; even as the indices continue their search for further direction. It is almost like the patterns are having a fight amongst themselves. There are three pattern formations which need to be understood clearly.

1. The first pattern which is now a casualty, being the Bearish Head & Shoulders formation on the daily charts. As we had mentioned last week the daily H&S would fail if the Sensex closed above 18724 and Nifty above 5705. This pattern has failed as both the indices managed a close above those levels.

2. The second pattern is the Bearish H&S formation on the weekly charts, which could not get completed because of its failure to close below the neckline on the weekly basis. This pattern will get completed when indices close below the neckline i.e. Sensex 18000 and Nifty 5384. This pattern can fail if the indices close above the right shoulder i.e. Sensex 19811 and Nifty 5944.

3. The third pattern which finds mention is the Descending Triangle formation. This pattern is under consideration because the previous bottom of Sensex and Nifty got tested without violating that bottom. The trendline joining these bottoms is almost horizontal. This pattern will get completed and generate a bullish breakout if the Sensex closes above 19018 and

NIFTY SPOT STRONG RESISTANCE AT 5749: JULY AND AUGUST MONTH MAY CLOSED IN RED AND BUYING OPPORTUNITY

The NSE Nifty closed at 5627 down by 20 points and BSE Sensex closed at 18763 down by 0.44% on weekend. Nifty may close in red in July and August month because of white-red-red pattern which was continued from last 10 months. In the June quarter, the index fell 3.1 percent, its second straight quarterly decline after rising for the previous eight, as spiralling inflation and a slowdown in economic growth dispelled investors. State-run Oil and Natural Gas Corp rallied as much as 6 percent in opening deals, bolstered by hopes for a reduction in the explorer's royalty burden for a gas field in western Rajasthan state. Infosys Technologies, India's No. 2 software services exporter, rose 0.8 percent to 2,934.15 rupees as encouraging data on Thursday from the United States boosted outsourcing demand prospects. Leading car maker Maruti Suzuki fell 1.4 percent to 1,143.15 rupees after it posted an 8.8 percent drop in June sales to 80,298 vehicles -- its first fall since December 2008. Foreign institutional investors net bought shares worth $1.1 billion in the last five sessions till June 30, although they have been buyers for only around $320 million so far in 2011. They had pumped in a record $29.3 billion in 2010. Greece's approval of austerity measures this week has boosted risk appetite, while an unexpected jump in business activity in the U.S. Midwest helped quell fears about an economic slowdown.

No let up in economic reforms: F.M

Finance Minister Pranab Mukherjee on Monday strongly refuted observations by US think-tanks, the government and industry that India has gone slow on economic reforms and insisted that a series of reforms are in the process, which will lead to the Mohan Singh. Reform is a continuous process and the UPA government is committed to it.

"The more you reform, there is the need for additional reform," he argued addressing a meeting of India and American corporate leaders,

Washington-based think-tank.

"We have taken certain steps, as I was talking of structural reforms," said Mukherjee, who arrived in Washington on Monday leading a high-powered Indian delegation for the second India-US Economic and Financial Partnership discussions being held here.

"We have recently finalized the guidelines of the debt bonds. We have also decided that... FDI to be more user-friendly (and) all prior regulation and guidelines have been consolidated into one comprehensive document which is reviewed every six months. This has been done with the specific intent of enhancing clarity and predictability of our FDI policy to foreign investors," he said.

"Ownership and control is now central to the FDI policy and the methodology in this regard has been clearly defined. Discussions are currently underway to build consensus on further liberalization of the FDI policy," he said. Certain important legislations for reform of banking regulations, enhancement of FDI in the insurance sector and pension fund regulation were introduced in the last session of Parliament, he said, hoping that it would be possible to get these legislations cleared expeditiously by Parliament.

"But I was mentioning to Secretary Geithner that in our system, we ought to have the consensus from the other parties, because we do not have the simple majority to get the laws passed in our Parliament. "The talks to develop a consensus are going on and I do hope it will be possible. With the help of the parties concerned, we would be able to get these legislations passed," Mukherjee said. In the areas of taxations, New Delhi, he said, has undertaken two major reforms.

"In direct taxes, it is under the scrutiny of the parliamentary standing committee and I do hope that from the next financial year, we will be able to operational it," he noted. "With respect of another reform, Goods and Services Tax, (on) said. And for that constitutional amendment, the central government requires a special majority and concurrence of 50 per next round of growth.

However, Mukherjee observed that reforms in India require political consensus, which is being worked upon by the government led by Prime Minister Man policy makers and think-tank members at a conference on the 'US-India Economic and Financial Partnership' jointly organized by the Confederation of Indian Industry (CII) and Brookings Institute, a which we are trying to evolve a consensus, because of our constitutional practice, these are areas of taxation which the Constitution has authorised the federal and provincial governments to enforce taxes on certain items. Unless the states agree and a constitutional amendment is introduced and passed, this is not possible to make it effective," he cent of the provincial government.

"Therefore, the consensus among the major political parties is absolutely necessary. It would be a very important reform if we are able to get this legislation passed. "We are working on that and if we are in a position to get this legislation passed, to my mind it will be a major reform," he said. "Another closed the week at 5627. The Nifty too closed with a strong weekly gain of 156 points.

In the current rally both Sensex and Nifty have left behind two Rising gaps. The first gap between Sensex 17754 - 17804 and Nifty 5330 - 5343 marked the daily charts after a gap up opening. On the Sensex, there is a big black body formation but it has a slight upper shadow and hence cannot be passed of as a Bearish Belt Hold. The formation however is bearish and will have similar implications as was already bullish as the market was well above the 20dma (Sensex - 18216 and Nifty - 5468) and this week it managed a close above the 50dma (Sensex - 18399 and Nifty - 5519) and as a result the medium term trend turned bullish.

But the market is still below the long term average of 200dma (Sensex - 19154 and Nifty - 5748). As a result, the short term trend and the medium term trends are bullish but the long term trend continues to remain down.

If we consider the entire fall from 21108 to 17295 for the Sensex and 6338 to 5177 for the Nifty then the correction levels will be 18751-19202-19651 for the Sensex and 5621-5758-5895 for the Nifty. There is a strong resistance zone formed by the convergence of Trendline resistance, 200dma and 50% retracement of the entire fall. Thus Sensex 19018-19202 and Nifty 5720-5758 forms a strong Resistance Zone. This zone defines the long term outlook for the market and a close above this zone will confirm a trend reversal in the long term.

The Greek debt crisis that was threatening to send global equity markets in to a tail-spin moved out of the sick bay last week. This sent a wave of relief through global equity markets lifting stock prices higher. The Sensex too rallied to end the week lower and this outlook had prompted them to build short positions in the Nifty. The speed and magnitude of the pull-back has taken these players by surprise and the sharp reduction in open interest to below Rs 100,000 crore denotes that many were

The persistent rally in the Sensex last week has taken it above both the 21- and 50-day moving averages. The index is however still below its 200-day moving average that is poised at 19,160. Oscillators in the daily chart have now moved deep in to the bullish territory. The weekly oscillators have not been similarly affected and they continue to feature in the neutral region, facing upward.

The inference from the oscillators is that though the short-term is gung-ho, the medium-term view has not turned bullish yet. The Sensex moved past the critical resistance at 18,267 that we had discussed in our last column. It even went past the next resistance at 18,857 on Friday though it ended the session below it.

We are once again ready to begin poring over Rs 6,000 crore in to the secondary market in the last eight sessions.

There was a consensus among traders over the last three months that the market was heading over quarterly earnings of companies and these numbers will influence sentiment in the week ahead. Progress of the monsoon will also be closely watched given IMD's revised forecast.

broad sideways movement between 17,000 and 21,000 since last November. It is hard to predict the exact shape that such corrections take. That the index is appearing

The area around 19,000 is a psychological resistance and the presence of the 200-DMA above it makes the entire zone between 18,850 and 19,200 a strong resistance in the near-term. Investors need to stay watchful as long as the index remains below this zone. But a strong move past will take the index to the key medium-term resistance around 19,800.

If the Sensex fails to move past the resistance zone between 18,850 and 19,200, or weakens at the outset of the week, it can decline to 18,440, 18,179 or 18,073. Short-term investors and traders can play long as long as the index holds above the first support, where the 50-DMA is also positioned.

The index needs to close below 18,000 to mar the short-term view and imply that it can head towards the recent trough at 17,314 again.

Nifty too thundered past the resistance at 5,481 indicated in our last column to move to the intra-week peak of 5,706 on Friday. The worst has been averted for the short-term with the firm move past index' movement next week.

In the short-term, the index will face resistance in the zone between 5,650 and 5,750. Presence of the 200-DMA in this zone adds to the significance of this resistance. Traders holding long positions can book some profits if the index fails to get past this zone.

Reversal from here can drag the index down to 5,511, 5,425 and 5,391. Short-term traders can continue to buy in dips as long as the index trades above the first support. Since the 50-DMA is positioned at 5,521, 5,500 can serve as stop loss for traders.

However strong move past 5,750 will mean that Nifty is heading towards the resistance zone around 5,900. As explained before, this is a critical resistance from a medium-term perspective and it is hard to envisage a move past this level just yet.

Global Cues

The sentiment reversed in global equity markets last week with Greece initiating austerity measures to stave off debt default. US manufacturing expanding at a faster rate than expected also confidence among investors.

European indices were at the forefront of this recovery and the DJ Euro STOXX 50 closed almost 6 per cent higher this week. The Dow and the S&P 500 made similarly strong moves. The Dow reversed from the intra-week low of 11,934 to close the week with 5 per cent gain. The index has also stormed past its short-term resistance at 12,500 implying that it can now attempt to storm the May peak of 12,876. Close below 11,800, where the 200 day moving average is positioned is needed to reverse the positive medium-term view for the index.

Asian markets too exulted in the resolution of the European crisis. Many Indices such as KLSE and Jakarta Composite closed at new record highs while the rest went on to close on a strong note. Indian and Chinese benchmarks were the only exception that turned a trifle jittery on Friday.

Reduction in risk-aversion made the dollar take a sharp plunge against other currencies. This helped crude oil and emerging market equities to move higher.

important reform we have decided to introduce is the mutual funds to directly attract investment from foreign investors who meet the KYC guidelines, Know-Your-Plans guidelines with a view to facilitate investment opportunity in India. Earlier, these windows were available only to foreign institutional investors," he said.

"Along with these in two stages, the ceiling for investment by FIIs into corporate bonds has been increased from the existing $15 billion to $40 billion. The Finance Minister said during the next five years, the infrastructure requirement would be up to the tune of $1 trillion, 50% of which would come from the private sector.

"Naturally, we do expect that (given) these various measures including the PPP project and the recent guidelines which we have issued for the debt funds, it would be possible for the private sectors to come and make investment. "In order to make PPP projects successful, we are providing support through a viability funding mechanism, which is quite attractive," he said.

India should achieve 9-9.5% growth in 12th Plan: Montek Says tough policy decisions hold the key; cautions against raising unrealistic expectations At a time when there is pressure on growth due to interest rate increases by the Reserve Bank of India

(RBI) to curb inflation, Planning Commission Deputy Chairman Montek Singh Ahluwalia has said India is in a strong position to achieve 9-9.5 per cent growth during the 12th Five-Year Plan (2012-17).

"Although the global situation is difficult, we should be able to achieve average 9 per cent growth during 12th Plan if tough policy decisions are taken in critical areas," Ahluwalia told Business Standard in an exclusive conversation on the possibilities of growth in the next Plan period, beginning April 2012. The plan panel is currently giving the final shape to the 12th Plan approach paper and the process is likely to be completed in the next 10 days.

New Samvat 2068 (Hindu New Year) have started from 4th April 2011. Whenever New Samvat starts, based on planetary position / conjunction & aspect among planets, some new sectors commence out performing & many sectors, which observed many times that investors / traders (not knowing this fact) keep investing / trading in such sectors, (whose astrological support is over) – resulting in losses. It is suggested to consult your Financial Astrologer to know about the sectors.

One should trade only in the stocks of that sectors which are getting very strong astrologically support, since the chances of losing money in such stocks are very less.

Sectors which get strong ASTRO support are not normally affected by downfall in the market.

"This list is featured largely with real estate and power industries. That may be because real estate is completely out of favour of the market. And power has also become out of favour of the market because of the fact that several IPOs from the power industry in the past have given dismal returns to the investors," he added.

Besides volatile market conditions, a high interest rate regime and a slew of recent scams involving real estate companies are also said to have contributed to the failure of realty players to successfully tap the market to raise funds.

levels to watch would be 5300 on the lower side 5570 on the upside'

The market unfolded volatile and gained tremendous strength due to short covering and closed positive for the week...

Technically the market looks up but is also stretched on the indicators front...and is against a stiff resistance of 5700-5720 zone and so I would not be surprised if a reaction sets in to maybe around 5510-5450 levels.

From a trading point of view I would be cautious and be in profit booking mode until 5700 gets taken out with force...

Govt to announce revised GDP for FY12 next week: Sources

Disappointing news from the macro economy after sources indicated that the government is likely to cut its FY12 GDP growth forecast early next week, reports CNBC-TV18's Aakanksha Sethi.

This is the first time in fact that it's being done only three months into the fiscal but look at the macro economic data. They really did not have a choice. Several of their budget projections have gone awry and now they are going to come out and revise the growth forecast downwards.

It was 9% that the economic survey had projected with a plus-minus of 0.25%. They are going to bring this down to about 8.5% to 8.6% plus-minus 0.10% to 0.20%. The final figures are going to be decided on Monday. So you are essentially looking at a range of 8.3-8.7%.

The key reasons of course are the global economic situation, components of aggregate demand - whether it is government spending or its investment or if rising global commodity prices, inflation has been high and you have an eco-system where the RBI continues to tighten interest rates. So a tight monetary policy given that they are looking at a 4.6% fiscal deficit number for which they might have to cut down on government spending. If you look at all the

it's net exports -the pressure is on all three. Hence, the government has decided to go ahead and revise that growth forecast downwards.

A lot of brokerages have forecasted growth at lower than 8%, so considering that, the government's projection is a little on the optimistic side.

Fitch cuts India FY12 GDP target to 7.7% vs 8.30%

Call it a slowdown or a temporary blip in growth momentum! Inflation continues play a spoilsport in India's growth story.

In its latest report christened as Global Economic Outlook, Fitch Ratings has cut India's GDP growth target from 8.3% (earlier) to 7.7% in FY12.

"India's economic outlook is likely to remain somewhat clouded by persistent inflationary pressures. India's economy has clearly hit a soft patch, as GDP grew 7.8% yoy in the first quarter of 2011, down from 8.4% yoy in Q4 2010 and 8.9% yoy in Q3-2010. Private sector investment activity not only appears to be affected by higher borrowing rates but has also been affected by other factors like rising input costs (ie, oil), weaker profitability and increasing bureaucratic red tape. As a consequence, Fitch has revised down its forecast for India's GDP growth."

The rating agency believes that the Reserve Bank of India will continue to raise key policy rates to contain inflation in FY12. However, this does not suggest that we are going back to recession like situation.

So, what's the good news?

The Fitch report says: "The global economic recovery remains on track, albeit at an uneven pace from quarter to quarter and from country to country. Emerging-market dynamism is still the main driver of the global recovery."

Fitch has revised down its growth forecasts for the BRIC economies (Brazil, Russia, India, and China) in 2011 from 7.1% to 6.9% and expects world growth to moderate to 3.1% in 2011 compared with 3.2% projected in the previous Global Economic Outlook and to rise to 3.4% in 2012 and 2013.

Basel Committee unveils new disclosure norms for banks

The Basel Committee on Banking Supervision, which is overseeing global reforms in the sector, today unveiled new guidelines that would require lenders to publish all details on their pay policies, particularly bonuses and performance incentives.

In the wake of global outcry against 'obscene' salaries and bonuses received by leading bankers, who caused the global financial crisis in 2008, the Committee has stipulated stringent capital adequacy requirements. It has come down heavily on the salary benefits that fuelled bankers to take such huge risks that eventually led to global economic meltdown.

"These disclosure requirements, developed in consultation with the Financial Stability Board, will support effective market discipline by allowing market participants to assess the quality of a bank's compensation practices and the incentives towards risk taking they support," the Basel

Committee said, while issuing new details.

"The Committee's Pillar 3 disclosure requirements add greater detail to the guidance on this topic that was included in the supplemental Pillar 2 guidance issued by the Committee in July 2009," it said, arguing that the proposals "cover the main components of sound remuneration practices".

Effectively, the new rules would force banks to provide timely information, including the names of people overseeing remuneration policies. Besides, the Banks will have to publish details on their employees overseeing risk-taking assignments in critical areas. In a separate development, the Committee issued two papers on operational risk-Principles for the Sound Management of Operational Risk and Supervisory Guidelines for the Advance Measurement Approaches.

They set out "the principles based on best industry practice and supervisory experience and cover three overarching themes: governance, risk management and disclosure" and "the regulatory capital adequacy framework."

IPO after clarity on spectrum, tax issues: Vodafone

When Vodafone Plc entered the Indian market five years ago it termed it as the jewel in its crown. But with issues such as spectrum pricing and withholding tax tormenting the British company over the last two years, the jewel seems to have lost some of its sheen.

"I think it is still a jewel but we need to polish it. Its got a little dust on it," said Mr Andy Halford, Group Chief Financial Officer, Vodafone Group Plc, in a conversation with Business Line.

Biggest worry

The biggest worry for the telecom major is the dispute with the Indian tax authorities over paying capital gains tax when Vodafone acquired Hutchison's stake in the joint venture with Essar. Tax authorities claim that Vodafone is liable to pay USD 2.5 billion. Vodafone maintains that no such tax is payable because the transaction took place in Cayman Island and not in India.

"When the Tata Group was buying Land Rover and Jaguar did UK authorities ask Tatas to pay such a tax? Or did Bharti Airtel pay withholding tax when it acquired the African operations? No. Then why should Indian authorities ask us to pay a tax on a transaction that has happened in another country. This is unprecedented," said Mr Halford.

"Even if tax were to be payable, the question is who has to pay. The party who made profit is Hutchison. Why for four years has no one in the Indian tax department gone after Hutchison at all?" he poses.

The second thing that could result in a huge pay out by Vodafone is the proposed pricing for spectrum. The telecom regulator has suggested a fee of over Rs 1,700 crore per Mhz pan India on all operators with more than 6.2 Mhz. "We want a predictable environment to operate. Retrospective changes are troublesome for us," Mr Halford says.

The immediate impact of these uncertainties is that Vodafone has pushed back its plans for a local listing in India. "The concept of IPO is something what we will look at. But it is not something we are rushing to do immediately because we need clarity on issues such as spectrum and tax," he said.

But all this does not mean that Vodafone is going slow in investing in India. The company, which has already invested nearly $23 billion in getting into India, is bullish on the future. "India is one of the six major markets for Vodafone globally. We won't be committing so much money if we didn't see huge potential," the CFO said.

Low-cost biz practices

The company is also taking the low-cost business practices developed in India to its global operations. "We are moving more activity out of Europe into countries like India and Egypt. I am also involved in standardising back-office operations. We now have a centre in Ahmedabad and another one in Pune. We are bringing more employment here. Marketing and advertising is good here and we are sharing it back in Europe," Mr Halford says. Meanwhile, the Supreme Court is expected to hear the tax case on July 19. That may decide whether the jewel regains its shine or not.

15 IPOs axed at the last minute since January 2011

As many as 15 companies, including Anil Ambani Group's Reliance Infratel, have refrained from bringing out their IPOs so far this year despite obtaining the go-ahead from market regulator Sebi to collectively raise an estimated Rs 25,000 crore.

The companies which have let their regulatory approvals lapse since January this year also include Jindal Power, Lodha Developers, Sterlite Energy, BPTP Ltd, Ambience Ltd and Gujarat State Petroleum Corp Ltd.

The list of 15

companies mostly comprises entities from the real estate and power sectors.

Reliance Infratel was the first company that failed to launch its Rs 5,000 crore IPO before the regulatory approval lapsed on January 11, while Jindal Power is the latest addition to the list after the approval for its Rs 7,200 crore public issue expired on May 27.

Market experts believe many companies were averse to hitting the market because of the subdued market conditions, as well as the fact that firms that did implement their public stake sale plans are trading below the issue price.

"As the first half of 2011 has seen missing FII inflows, resulting in lukewarm market sentiment, it is surely taking a toll on the IPO market," SMC Global Securities Strategist and Head of Research Jagannadh Thunuguntla said.

In all, 15 public issues were planned with the objective of raising about Rs 25,186 crore.

Other companies that axed their IPO plans at the last minute include Glenmark Generics, Neptune from the Department of Divestment (DoD).

Hoping to see clarity on subsidy issue before the FPO road shows begin, Hazarika said that floor above USD55/bbl will be good for the company.

The offer, expected to raise up to USD 2.8 billion, has been delayed by several months as rising crude oil prices and consequently higher subsidy burden kept the state-run firm away from the market.
